

The faculty of the State Educational Institution "Finance, Accounting, and Audit," including Associate Professor D.T. Zhumanova, PhD in Economics; Professor Zh.M. Omarkhanova, PhD in Economics; and Senior Lecturer G.K. Kenes, PhD in Economics, held a university-level methodological seminar on the results of their research internship at the University of Minnesota (USA) as part of the "500 Scholars" program.

At the seminar, they shared their achievements during the research internship, modern teaching methods used in the US higher education system, the COIL method, interactive presentations, integration into global SDG projects, analytical research methods, and experience using digital platforms in education. They also outlined plans for the effective implementation of the knowledge and experience gained during the internship in Kazakhstan.
